

ABSTRACT

[0080] A development tool enables a device database to be created, managed, and deployed to a device as part of the a device project. The device database may have an installation property which provides logic for installing the device database at the device. Additionally, stored procedures and triggers may be registered with the device database. The registered stored procedures and triggers may be embedded in the device database and deployed to the device along with the device database.